

Dr Lampros Samartzis MD PhD is a clinical Psychiatrist that is mainly working in the field of Addiction Psychiatry. He finished his PhD in the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, Greece, and he is the author of many research papers already published in peer reviewed journals. He is Honorary Assistant Professor of Psychiatry in Nicosia University, Clinical Collaborator in the Medical School of the European University as well as Special Scientist in the Medical School of the University of Cyprus. He is currently coordinates the public sector services for drug and alcohol detoxification and rehabilitation clinic as well as the opioid substitution treatment clinic, of the public sector in Nicosia, Cyprus. Lampro's main research interests are Mental Health Policy, Addiction Psychiatry, Alcohol Use Disorder, Opioid Use Disorder, Drug Induced Psychosis, Drug Induced Mood Disorder, Quality of Life in the severely ill, Meta-analysis of Clinical Trials, Neuroimaging in Psychiatry.